Chef Peter Cuong's sophisticated

sequel to ANAN

A sequel to ANAN, NHAU NHAU is a modern Vietnamese pho bar founded by award-winning chef Peter Cuong Franklin. The sophisticated venue is a re-imagination and celebration of traditional Vietnamese nhau street drinking and eating culture—the equivalent of Japanese izakayas, Spanish tapas bars, American taverns, and Thai aahaan kap.

Combining the mood of a modern izakaya with elevated classic Vietnamese food, NHAU NHAU is a place to drink, eat, and celebrate the city of Saigon. The menu includes new-style pho, banh mi, and flavorful small plates. In addition to local bia hoi and regional rice spirits and sake, the drinks menu includes curated wines, whiskeys, and tropical-inspired cocktails.

NHAU NHAU is located in the heart of District 1 in the same building as ANAN Saigon. Situated in the "Cho Cu" wet market, Chef Peter is elaborating on the location's dining and drinking experience which includes the lively restaurant on the ground floor and first floor, the intimate rooftop bar with spectacular views of the Bitexco Financial Tower set against the panoramic Saigon skyline, and now the new NHAU NHAU pho bar on the second floor.

NHAU NHAU's interior was designed by Sean Dix, a renowned international designer and architect based in Hong Kong and Milan. The color palette takes its theme from the Saigon of the '60s—the golden era of modern Vietnamese rock 'n' roll music. Design features include dark turquoise handmade wall tiles, redwood-framed vintage Vietnamese album covers and custom-made wooden bar, stools, tables and outdoor balcony. Construction was executed by WT Viet Nam.

Added to that, NHAU NHAU's branding is by local design firm The Lab Saigon, its music is by resident selector and local crate digger Datodeo, and the entrance-way wall artwork is by French-Vietnamese graffiti artist SUBY ONE.
